Move Weld County, CO to Wyoming

A big big thank you!

A big thanks for everyone's support. It is truly amazing how quickly we have moved along in the last few months. The time is right for us to get this accomplished but we have a long road ahead. Let's revisit where this idea originated, where we are now and what the future holds.

It started with an opinion in the Denver Post sometime around April 2019. I thought it was the craziest thing I had ever heard. Sat on it for a few days and thought I would make a Facebook page to see if anyone else thought it was crazy too. So I shared it with a few people and watched it slowly get a few likes a month. Then sometime in late 2019 the page caught the eye of the right few people. The page likes went from 150 to 1500 almost overnight, and the interest in making this happen was starting to become something people were starting to notice. A few volunteers stepped up and there was a true start to the grassroots movement. Then, it was decided that we would let the 2020 election happen and weigh the options after. There were already a few ballot initiatives out there collecting signatures. We were afraid we could get lost in the massive build up to the November election.

The massive disappointment of the November election from the local and state levels was a crushing blow to Weld County. Colorado is moving faster and faster to becoming a little sister of California. The Denver/Boulder liberals continued their relentless attacks on the rural communities throughout Colorado. The urban/rural divide is larger than ever.

In the next few weeks we will have the petition language written and get it to print, soon getting them out for signatures. Facebook is growing steadily. The message is getting out there. I have been on the radio in Cheyenne and asked to do interviews on others. We have had two meetings with a lot of great people and looking at having more. With the strange days of COVID, we have to come up with equally strange ways of getting the message out there.

2021 brings the promise of new hope to make things better for the citizens of Weld County. We will be looking to spread the word of Weld County, WY everywhere and any way we can. Please follow on Facebook for future happenings. Help spread the word.

Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year
